the house of late.

On the afternoon of Oct. 23, Margaret raised a great commotion in the house. She told Mrs. Tibbells that a sneak thief was seen upstairs, and that when she had endeavored to catch him he eluded her clutch and disappeared. She described the intruder minutely. At first her story was implicitly believed.

Mrs. Hoyt found that her bedroom had been ransacked and a gold watch and chain, two diamond rings, an opal ring. a diamond pendant, and three diamond pins had been stolen. When Mr. Baldwin returned that night he missed a gold watch and chain, a diamond pin, and a long gold cnain from his room. The total value of the stolen property was about $1,450.

The case was investigated by Detectives Bedell and Gilpin, of the Ninth Precinct, and when they cross-examined Margaret, it is said that they succeeded in breaking down her story of a sneak thief, and that she admitted stealing the lewelry, but said that she did so at the instigation of a lover. The police profess to be ignorant of his name and address, and Margaret refused to give his name to an "Evening World" reporter this morning, and said he was out of town.

Most of the stolen property has been recovered from various pawnbrokers.

Clapp Bro.'s store is one of the largest retail establishments in the "Hill" section of the city. The burglars evidently planned to make a rich haul.

The burglary was discovered when the store was opened this morning, and the police were notified. Detectives found no marks on the front doors or windows and began to look in anther direction to ascertain how the thieves got into the building. They discovered that an entrance had been effected by forcing an iron grating in the rear of the store, which opens onto St. James place. The thieves went through the cellar and finding that they wer unable to reach the store through the trap door, they cut a hole in the floor and crawled through.

Mr. Clapp said to-day that the thieves got very little for their work. He had looked over his stock, and as far as he could discover they only got about $2$ in small change, which had been left in the cash drawer, four boxes of cigars and four small flasks of whiskey.

John J. Mitchell, candidate for Sheriff on the straight Democratic ticket, objected to the County Clerk printing ballots for the Gleasonites, on the ground that the nominations were improperly made. "To hold that a large body of Democrats or Republicans, who are in sympathy with their party nominations for State officers could not have an official ballot bearing those nominations, because of factional differences with respect to local candidates, would be to restrict rather than facilitate independent voting."

The Organization of Richmond County Democrats, an independent party, was put in the same boat with Gleason by the "straights" on Staten Island.

Matthew S, Tully, the straight Democratic candidate for County Treasurer, objected to the independents being furnished ballots. Application was made to Justice Gaynor for a writ of mandamus compelling the County Clerk to print the names of the local nomines of the independents on the same ballot with those of the straight State, Judicial and Congressional tickets.

In his opinion, Justice Gaynor says in substance that in the case in question the nominations were party nominations. They were made by a county convention composed of the delegates elected at primaries. When the certificates of nomination were filed with the County Clerk it was his duty in making up a complete set of ballots to put the names of the office

oal. If in other cities this could be done, why should not Gothamites enjoy the same?

An investigation among several of the thousands of bakeries in New York showed that "The Evening World's" story of last Friday has already borne, fruit. The public has been aroused, and all that now remains is for the public to concentrate action and make a demand for a reduction of the price of bread.

But where should the demand be placed? The retail baker is not so much at fault as is the wholesale man. While there is no combine among the big bakers, there exists an understanding in regard to prices, and in years there has been no cut or competition in regard to what bread shall be sold to the middleman, the grocer, for. If the small baker attempts to undermine this standard price he is pushed to the wall. As usual, it is the same old story of monopoly and oppression.

Among the big wholesale people are such firms as Shultts, Fleischmann, Rockwell, Herseman, the "O K," and Winfield & Taylor.

For years these firms have practically controlled the bread market. Last Summer there was a slight reduction in the price of bread, but it only lasted for a few days. For several years they have set the price to the public at five cents a loaf.

In The Evening World.

How They Can Go to Housekeeping Without Ready Money. There seems to be no reason why couple, young or old, should not so be housekeeping, since furniture can be bought so cheaply and even without ready cash. A seemingly incredible offer is made by J. Baumann & Bro., of 1818 and 1315 Third avenue, who agree to furni a three-room flat for $75 and a five-room flat for $115. Every neces
